

ACT IT OUT SCENARIO 1

A new kid moved into your neighborhood. Suddenly, your friends are crowding around to listen to her stories. They are asking her questions instead of you. You feel jealous. So you lie and tell your friends that the new girl stutters when she reads out loud in class.

ACT IT OUT SCENARIO 1

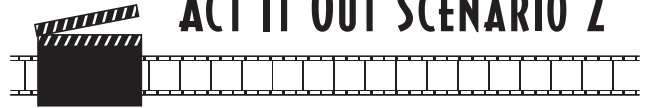

A new kid moved into your neighborhood. Suddenly, your friends are crowding around to listen to her stories. They are asking her questions instead of you. You feel jealous. So you lie and tell your friends that the new girl stutters when she reads out loud in class.

ACT IT OUT SCENARIO 2

You and your friend are playing baseball in the park. You see two younger kids. You tell them you'll watch their gloves while they go to the bathroom. As soon as they leave, you take them and hide them behind a bush. When the kids come back, you lie and say a teenager stole them.

ACT IT OUT SCENARIO 2

You and your friend are playing baseball in the park. You see two younger kids. You tell them you'll watch their gloves while they go to the bathroom. As soon as they leave, you take them and hide them behind a bush. When the kids come back, you lie and say a teenager stole them.